

Special Edition: National Spotlight on SPCA Tampa Bay continues to grow

Friends, neighbors & concerned citizens of Pinellas County:

The SPCA Tampa Bay and local law enforcement continue to draw national scrutiny regarding the pig Waddles. Waddles was allowed to live-roast under the July sun and heat without shade or medical care at the SPCATB for 10 days in July, 2025. He sustained 3rd degree burns.

SPCA OF TAMPA BAY THEIR CRUELTY CONTINUES

After Waddles, the Questions Around SPCA Tampa Bay Only Grew

After a cruelty citation and vacated guilty plea over Waddles the pig, SPCA Tampa Bay now faces tougher questions about leadership, spending, and accountability.

Click the link below to read more:

https://open.substack.com/pub/animalpolitics/p/after-waddles-the-questions-around?utm_source=share&utm_medium=android&r=ulf4h

"Ed Boks is a longtime animal welfare leader and writer who has served as executive director of the New York City, Los Angeles, and Maricopa County animal care and control departments. He also writes about shelter policy, no-kill strategies, and the intersection of animal welfare and politics."

Unsubscribe

